HISTORY OF THE 372ND INFANTRY REGIMENT

The 372nd Infantry Regiment has just completed the fourth year of its Federal service in World War II. On March 10, 1941, it was re-assembled at Fort Dix, New Jersey, to prepare for the crisis which brought the United States directly into the conflict with the advent of Pearl Harbor. The tradition of the regiment goes back, however, to 1863.

The regiment has not failed to carry on its remarkable record in World War II. Of the 49,000 Negro troops in the Infantry Corps it has trained well over one-third the number. These have gone as cadremen to other combat units and arms to make remarkable contributions to the war effort. Numerous former 372nd officers and men have been decorated, received citations, commendations and honors, records show. Most of those leaving continue to regard the regiment as their own. Some have made the supreme sacrifice in the service of their country.

In April, 1944, a three-year period spent on guard and internal security duty in New York City and in the Metropolitan Area, terminated. The first movement to Camp Breckinridge, Kentucky, began an era of which the regiment furnished training of thousands of troops who became reinforcements for units which were soon to go overseas to all theaters of war. In November, 1944, the regiment came to historical Fort Huachuca, Arizona, for additional training.

The fourth annual celebration of 372nd Infantry Regimental Day finds the unit eager to prove itself as a unit in further calls of duty. The regiment is proud of its tradition, and it has reason to know that its future has been predicted in the splendid records made by former comrades whom it has sent forth to the ultimate test. On this Regimental Day, this Year of Grace, 1945, the 372nd Infantry accepts willingly the challenge of the future.

The chronological past history of the 372nd Infantry Regiment is as follows:

In 1863—eighty-two years ago, and a proud marching tradition of the 372nd Infantry Regiment was born with the organization of an unattached company in the Independent Division, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, later to become the present "L" Company of the regiment.

In 1874 the Duquesnes Blues in Ohio added to this tradition by their organization, the result of which is the second battalion of the regiment.

In 1875 the beginning of the Seventh and Eighth Battalions, Infantry, District of Columbia National Guard, this tradition continued to be built, and as an outgrowth the regiment has the present Regimental Headquarters Company.

In 1879 Baltimore, Maryland, contributed further to this proud tradition with the organization of the Monumental City Guards, later to become the present Service Company.

In 1931 New Jersey organized the counterpart of the present First Battalion.

The 372nd Infantry (as such) was originally organized in 1917 as a unit of the 93rd Infantry Division of World War I. It was made up of National Guard units from the District of Columbia, Ohio, Massachusetts, Maryland, Connecticut and Tennessee. The regiment served overseas in France with the 157th (Red Hand) French Division, and participated in the Meuse-Argonne Offensive and the defensive sectors of Lorraine, 28 May 1918, and in Alsace, 15 October to 11 November 1918. They fought the conclusive battle of World War I at Bussey Farms.

Commendation was received from the Commanding Officer of the French 157th Infantry Division, Colonel Quillet, on its very first engagement, from 26 September 1918 to October 1918, at Meuse-Argonne for showing "finest qualities of bravery and daring." Its colors were decorated with the Croix de Guerre with palm for this action. The 372nd Infantry Regiment was also mentioned in the notes of General Carreir Duplossis, Commanding General of the Ninth Army Corps, who commended it for the "feats . . . of the day of that victorious journey . . . engraved in the hearts of their chief."

panies of National Guardsmen from New Jersey—Trenton, Camden, Newark and Atlantic City, comprising the First Battalion. These were redesignated in September, 1940, as Companies A, B, C, D, 372nd Infantry. The Baltimore, Maryland, company which had served as Company I, 372nd Infantry, in World War I, was redesignated on 2 August 1940 as Service Company, 372nd Infantry. Company A, First Separate Battalion, District of Columbia, was redesignated 22 August 1940 as Headquarters Company, 372nd Infantry. The first three battalions strengthened and reorganized, were intact.

When on 15 December 1918 General Goybet, commanding the French 157th Division, returned to 371st and 372nd Infantry Regiments to American command, he told in detail of seven months during which "we have lived as brothers in arms, sharing the hardships, dangers, and victories. He charged: "Dear Friends from America, after you have crossed the ocean anew, forget not the Red Hand Division. Our pure fraternity of arms has been soaked in the blood of braves. These ties are indissoluble."

On 10 March 1941 the 372nd Infantry Regiment was called back into Federal Service for World War II. It was augmented by four com-

First Battalion was originally organized as the First Separate Battalion of Infantry, District of Columbia National Guard, by the consolidation of the Seventh and Eighth Battalions, Infantry, the companies of which were organized at various dates between 1875 and 1882. The First Battalion served on the Mexican Border from June to October, 1916. In March, 1917, the First was mustered into Federal Service, and was engaged in guarding public works and installations of strategic importance in and near the City of Washington, D. C. In December, 1917, it was redesignated the First Battalion, 372nd Infantry Regiment, 93rd Division. The Battalion served overseas, however, with the French 157th Division (whose insignia is the red hand). It participated in the Meuse-Argonne operation, and in defensive sectors in Alsace and Lorraine. The unit returned to the United States and was demobilized 6 March 1919.

The First Separate Battalion, District of Columbia National Guard, which served as the First Battalion, 372nd Infantry Regiment, during World War I, began its reorganization in April, 1921. It was designated First Battalion, 372nd Infantry, 8 December 1925. The present First Battalion was organized in New Jersey in 1931 as the First Separate Battalion of New Jersey Militia, and Federally recognized in 1940. It was designated as the present First Battalion, 372nd Infantry, in September, 1940.

The Second Battalion was organized in 1881 as the Ninth Battalion of Infantry, Ohio National Guard, from existing companies—the oldest of which was the Duquesnes Blues (1874). The battalion was mustered into Federal service in May, 1898, and served within the continental limits of the United States during the Spanish-American War. It was mustered out in January, 1899, and resumed its state status.

It was taken into Federal service again 5 August 1917, and in January, 1918, was redesignated the Second Battalion, 372nd Infantry Regiment, 93rd Division. It participated in the Meuse-Argonne operation and in defensive sectors in Alsace and Lorraine as a part of the French 157th Infantry Division. The Second Battalion returned to the United States and was demobilized 6 March 1919. The Ninth Battalion of Infantry, Ohio National Guard, which served in World War I as the Second Battalion, 372nd Infantry, was reorganized in 1924 as the First Separate Battalion of Infantry; it was redesignated the Second Battalion, 372nd Infantry Regiment, 1 April 1925.

The Third Battalion was organized in 1863 as an unattached company in the Independent Division, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. The company was redesignated the 14th Company the following year. In 1866 it became known as Company A, Second Battalion, Infantry. It served in the Civil War. In 1878 the company was assigned to the Sixth Regiment as Company L. It was mustered into Federal service in May, 1898, and served in Puerto Rico during the Spanish-American War, and was mustered out in January, 1899. The company resumed its state status thereafter.

It was mustered into Federal service again 6 April 1917, and on 1 January 1918 it was redesignated L Company, 372nd Infantry, 93rd Division, of World War I. The company served overseas with the French 157th Infantry Division, and participated in the Meuse-Argonne operation and in the defensive sectors in Alsace and Lorraine. It returned to the United States and was demobilized 6 March 1919. Company L, Sixth Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, which served during World War I as Company L, 372nd Infantry, was reconstituted in the National Guard of Massachusetts as the Third Battalion, 372nd Infantry Regiment.

The colors of the regiment carry four battle streamers: one for service in Puerto Rico; one for service in Lorraine; one for service in Alsace; one for service in Meuse-Argonne offensive; the fifth streamer indicates the award of the French Croix de Guerre with Palm.

The regimental insignia, seen as a shield ornament, has blue for the Infantry, a wide red diagonal and a narrow gold diagonal which indicate service in Alsace and Lorraine. The Puerto Rican castle signifies service in the Spanish-American War. The Red Hand exemplifies service with the 157th French Division.

The motto: "Fidelis Et Paratus," loyal and ready, is that written in the hearts of all Americans.

In accordance with a supplement to the New Jersey Militia Act of 14 July 1931, on 25 September 1931 this company organized in Newark was mustered into service and designated Company A, First Battalion, New Jersey State Militia.

The company received its first field training at Sea Girt, N. J. September 17-30, 1932. From 9-11 September 1934 it was assigned to the rescue of victims of the S.S. Morro Castle which was burning off shore. Through hurricane and stormy seas they saved the drowning and recovered bodies of the dead. Both companies received from Governor Moore and the State Legislature citations for their courage, courtesy and sympathetic handling of a very gruesome duty.

Company A won the Enoch L. Johnson Trophy for six years out of nine, and the Combat Trophy for the years 1932-33. Received Federal recognition on 9 September 1940, called to active duty on 10 March 1941, and moved to Fort Dix, N. J., on 19 March 1941.

Under SO 531 of 2 September 1863 the organization of a company of Infantry for the Independent Division of Militia MVM, established under Chapter 243, Act of 1863, was authorized. On 20 August 1864, following organization, the company was designated the 14th Unattached Company, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia. On 20 August 1866, the 14th Unattached Company was united with the 74th Unattached Company to constitute the Second Battalion of Infantry, and was designated Company A.

On 28 April 1876 the organization was disbanded, but was reactivated the following year and on 25 June 1877 was assigned as a company to the First Brigade MVM as a unit of unattached Militia. On 3 December 1878 the designation was changed to Company L, Sixth Infantry MVM.

It remained in state service until May, 1898, when, as Sixth Infantry, Massachusetts Volunteers (U.S.), it was mustered into Federal service in the Spanish-American War. It served in Puerto Rico from 25 July to 21 October 1898. When mustered out it returned to the service of the state.

On 6 April 1917 Company L was mustered into Federal Service. It was separated from the Sixth Regiment and designated the First Separate Company, Infantry, 5 August 1917 and proceeded, eventually, to Camp Stuart, Va. It was redesignated on 12 December 1917, effective 1 January 1918, Company L, 372nd Infantry, 93rd Division. It arrived at St. Nazaire, France, 12 April 1918, and was later attached to the 157th French (Red Hand) Army Division. It served with great distinction, was cited, and finally returned to American high command 12 December 1918. It arrived in New York 19 February 1919 and was mustered out at Fort Devens, Massachusetts, 27 February 1919.

Company L, Sixth Regiment Infantry, MVM, organized as a provisional unit for duty during the Boston Police Strike 20 June 1919, and was disbanded 12 July 1920. Company L was reactivated 1921 as a part of the Third Battalion, 372nd Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard. It retained its identity in the Battalion, confirmed as of 1 January 1925, and again in June, 1929.

The unit was inducted into Federal service 10 March 1941 and reported soon to Fort Dix, N. J.

On 15 March 1922 Company M of Boston, Massachusetts, was Federally recognized as Company D, Second Separate Battalion of Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard. On 1 January 1925 Company D was redesignated Company M, 372nd Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard.

Although a National Guard Machine Gun unit, Company M placed first, second and third in rifle matches. Moreover in the Machine Gun matches at Wakefield, Mass., Company M made excellent showing in competition against such Regular Army units as the 26th Division and Cavalry outfits, invariably taking the first three places.

Camp site for the National Guard was Fort Devens, Mass., from 1922 to 1934, and Camp Edwards, Mass., from 1935 until 1940. In November, 1939, the War Department ordered the Third Battalion, 372nd Infantry, to a period of vigorous field training at Blue Hills, Mass., emphasizing extensive battalion combat problems.

On 10 March 1941, Company M was inducted into Federal service, and on 18 March 1941, with other companies of the Third Battalion, 372nd Infantry Regiment, reported to Fort Dix, N. J. Since that time the unit has continued to distinguish itself in the Regiment.
